

Subject: Ending Overfishing Can Mitigate Impacts of Climate Change

Dear President-elect,

You have declared, “Our most pressing challenge is keeping our planet healthy”, and have committed to act on climate, including with the drafting of a Green Deal. The ocean is key to the health of the planet: it is the origin of all life on Earth; provides us with every second breath; and has absorbed over 90 percent of anthropogenic warming. But climate change is threatening the health of the ocean and the critical services it provides for life on the planet.

Climate change is not the only pressure we are putting the ocean under. A working paper just published by Professor Rashid Sumaila of the University of British Columbia highlights how ending overfishing would be one of the most significant acts we could take to build ocean health, and so its capacity to mitigate climate change and restore marine biodiversity. And this is what the public are calling for: significant and immediate action on climate change.

Furthermore, the IPCC Special Report on the Ocean and Cryosphere in a Changing Climate talks of an ocean “Poised to Unleash Misery”, unless we halt catastrophic climate change. While reversing anthropogenic climate change will take many years, ending overfishing is only missing political will. Recent estimates suggest that at least 40 percent of fish stocks in the North East Atlantic and 87 percent in the Mediterranean and Black Seas are being overfished. This is despite the EU’s target of ending all overfishing by January 1st 2020.

We are calling on you to include blue in the Green Deal by prioritising the ending of EU overfishing as decisive action on climate. Not only will this play a significant role in improving ocean health, it will benefit fisheries dependent communities throughout Europe as fish stocks rebuild.

We believe Professor Sumaila’s report and the IPCC report make a compelling case for decisive action on restoring ocean health in order to maintain a habitable planet. Ending overfishing is the most significant and quickest action we can take, please include it in the Green Blue Deal.

Yours sincerely,

Maria Walsh
Group of the European
People’s Party/ Christian
Democrats
Ireland

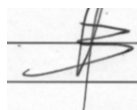

Younous Omarjee
Group of the European
United Left/ Nordic
Green Left
France

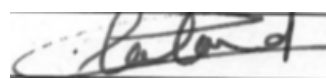

Grace O'Sullivan
Group of the Greens/
European Free Alliance
Ireland

Chris Davies
Renew Europe Group
United Kingdom

Francisco Guerreiro
Group of the Greens/
European Free Alliance
Portugal

M. Benoit BITEAU
Group of the Greens/
European Free Alliance
France

Catherine Chabaud
Renew Europe Group
France

Bas Eickhout
Group of the Greens/
European Free Alliance
Netherlands